

The Independent,

Feb. 6. 1844.

My dear Mr. Garrison,

Your letter, and the article from the London Daily News, are in this week's Independent.
I need not say that I took great pleasure

in printing both.

On the editorial page, I have made a brief paragraph friendly to Mr. Phillips. I did this because I wish to accustom myself to return good for evil. "A soft answer turneth away wrath."

I too was sorry to leave Boston so suddenly. But the day following the meeting was so stormy that I thought my further stay would be comfortable
neither to myself nor my friends.

Can you guess
how much larger your

audience of readers is, when you write in The Independent, than when you wrote in The Libera-tor? It print 60,000 copies.

D.D. N.Y. Oct. 6, 1855.

So, write often!

Yours with love,

Frederic Tilton
